Re: Your inquiry of April 28, 2026 involving a Other - Employment.

Dear

We want to thank you for the opportunity to review your possible claim. Unfortunately, it does not appear that we will be able to handle your case and must regretfully inform you that we are declining to represent you for this potential case.

Our decision only pertains to the above referenced call dated April 28, 2026 and Other - Employment. If you have another case open with our firm, we will continue to represent you on that matter unless otherwise stated by your legal team. If you have an open case with our firm and have a question regarding that claim please reach out to your legal team.

You should be aware that civil actions are subject to laws called statutes of limitations. A statute of limitations provides a time limit to bring a lawsuit. If you fail to file the appropriate papers with the court before the statute of limitations applicable to your cause(s) of action expires, you will be barred from proceeding with the lawsuit and barred from recovering the damages you seek.

Attorneys often have differing views. Should you wish to continue to pursue your case, I urge you to seek the representation of another firm immediately.

Since we are not taking your case, you do not owe our firm anything for fees or costs. Although we will not be representing you in this case, I do wish to thank you for considering our firm and hope that you do not hesitate to contact us again should you ever require legal services.

Sincerely,

Eddie Farah
